U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Reviews Cleanup at Tyler Refrigeration Pit Site

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is conducting its third Five-Year Review of the Tyler Refrigeration Pit Superfund Site located in Smyrna, Kent County. While the site was deleted from the National Priorities List of most hazardous waste sites in 2004, EPA continues to inspect the remedy every five years to confirm that the cleanup, which included a detailed investigation and ongoing groundwater monitoring, continues to be fully protective of human health and the environment. EPA's last formal review of the site in 2007 confirmed that the remedy continues to be protective of public health and the environment in the long-term.

What is an EPA Five-Year Review?

EPA inspects Superfund sites every five years to ensure that cleanups conducted remain fully protective of human health and the environment. These regular reviews, which are required by federal law when contaminants remain at a site, include:

- Inspection of the site and cleanup technologies;
- Review of monitoring data, operating data, and maintenance records, and
- Determination if any new regulatory requirements have been established since EPA's original cleanup decision was finalized.

When will EPA's Five-Year Review Report be available?

The Five-Year Review report will be finalized and made available online at <http://epa.gov/5yr> by September 2012.
